Career Opportunities

The fields of Electronic Technology, Radio and Television Communications and Journalism offer many career opportunities for men and women.

In the fields of radio and television communications, careers available include announcing continuity, farm broadcasting, newscasting, sportscasting, broadcast advertising sales, public relations, television camera and video technicians, industrial video people, cable television operators, technicians, programmers, and many entry level electronic technician openings in broadcasting and industrial applications.

Dodge City Community College offers excellent "hands-on" experience for any student wanting quick experience in the fields of Radio and Television, Electronics and Journalism.

A journalism degree will provide the student with a liberal arts educational background that can be used in a multitude of career choices.

In journalism some specific career choices might include: newspaper or magazine reporter, newspaper or magazine editor, newspaper or magazine graphic layout and design artist, advertising sales, public relations, copy editor, photographer, corporate journalist, and journalism teacher (when combined with education).

Opportunities to work on student publications exist for both journalism majors and non-majors alike. Students compile and edit the college's traditional award-winning publications Conquistador, the student newspaper, and Golden Shield, the student yearbook. A separate photography staff serves both of these publications.

This early "hands-on" experience allows students to begin developing their own journalistic style long before most students at four-year institutions get on a publications staff.

Students have the opportunity to work with KINF FM (91.9), a student operated, non-commercial FM radio station or DC-3 Television, which is hooked into Dodge City CATV. DCCC also offers a complete Electronics Lab.

Dodge City Community College is an active member of the Kansas Association of Broadcasters, and also works with local media and industry in providing students with internship and part-time jobs.

Financial Aid

Dodge City Community College has developed a variety of financial aid packages to assist students in overcoming economic problems associated with college attendance. DCCC accepts financial aid applications and makes decisions regarding those applications without regard to sex, race, creed, disability, or national origin.

Students who wish to apply for a Pell Grant or Stafford Loan must first establish their eligibility by completing their ACT Family Financial Statement and have their expected family contribution determined. It takes approximately four to six weeks to process an ACT Family Financial Statement. If a student is determined eligible to apply for a loan, it takes at least another three to four weeks for the loan application to be processed.

To qualify for any federal financial aid, a student needs to have a high school diploma or GED. Students who do not meet these requirements may arrange to take a vocational test to determine ability to benefit. Contact the DCCC Testing Center well in advance of the class starting date to arrange for testing.

Veterans who meet eligibility requirements may receive benefits for credit courses taken at the college. For more information call 316-225-1321, Ext. 208.

Any student with a financial concern is encouraged to contact the DCCC Financial Aid Director for additional information.
